Sir David Attenborough

Sir David Attenborough is probably the most famous presenter on British television. He has made wildlife documentaries for the BBC since the 1940s and has travelled to hundreds of different countries to film endangered animals. He has swum with dolphins and has sat next to a gorilla in the wild. He also has a famous brother – the actor and director Sir Richard Attenborough.

Sir David was born in London in 1926 and, after going to university, started his career at the BBC (the British Broadcasting Corporation) when he was 23. He made quiz shows and music programmes before getting a job as a presenter on 'Zoo Quest'. On the programme, Sir David went to Africa with an expedition from London Zoo.

Since then, Sir David Attenborough has made a lot of TV series. The most well-known was a series called 'Life'. He has also written best-selling books and supported environmental charities. And he hasn't retired. If he continues to have good health, he will make a new TV series in the new year.
