

St. Jordi Writing. A Mystery Story

He found the journal on the train and what could he do? Knowing that the right thing would have been to leave the journal where he found it and not open it, he decided that he wanted to return it to his master, since it was too beautiful how for to leave it on the train. He opened it to find a name that would identify his master, but what he found was a note stating: "Whoever opened this journal has the obligation to read it in full".

There was a series of instructions and a map, when completing the firsts instructions he arrived at the last wagon and the journal said: "You will arrive at what seems to be the exit but in reality it is the entrance to a fantastic world". Firmly believing these words, he opened the door, behind the door he saw many fantastic creatures and a mysterious man sitting in an armchair. Suddenly the man got up and asked, "That diary is yours, boy?", he denied with his head. "So how could you read it?" said the man, the boy didn't answer. "Well then ... You should not be here yet, I'll contact you in the future" said the man for the last time.

-Ciiiieell, get up!! We have arrived!!

-Eh what? Where are the creatures and the man?

-What I said .. I have a stupid brother who does not differentiate dreams from reality.

-But, WOW, was so real!! - Answered the boy.

-Well, you did not move from here so... - said the sister.

Since that day the boy has been waiting for the man to come back and explain what happened. And yes, finally the man came. But that is another story that I will explain in another moment.
