

A GERMAN TASTER

A few days ago, some teachers from a German adult school visited us. They organized some activities and one of them was a German class. The teacher, named Meryem, only spoke German; that was so interesting and funny at the same time. It was a nice experience, even though none of us knew anything in German, we understood each other and learned to introduce ourselves and greet each other in German in a formal and informal way.

Now, I know a few words in German; for example, I can ask in German, 'What is your name?' and say 'Good morning' at the same time: "Guten Tag. Wie ist dein Name?", but then I would have to say "Tschuss" , which means bye, because I wouldn't know how to say anything else. No doubt, it would be a short conversation because I think that learning German is much more difficult than learning English.

Anyway, it was a very entertaining class and I liked the experience a lot.
